Events That May Change Continued Coverage

Once your COBRA coverage begins, you may be able to change your COBRA coverage elections if you experience a qualified change in status. You, your covered spouse, or your covered dependents must notify the by calling within 31 days of the qualified change in status to change your COBRA coverage. See your Summary Plan Description for detailed information on allowable changes in status. Adding family members to COBRA coverage may result in a higher premium for this additional coverage.

You may also change COBRA coverage if a child is born to the covered employee or placed for adoption with the covered employee during the 18-, 29-, or 36-month continuation period. In such case, you must notify the by calling within 31 days of the birth or placement to cover the new dependent as a qualified beneficiary under COBRA. There may be a higher premium for this additional coverage.

When Coverage Ends

COBRA coverage will end automatically as detailed below:

This section is about when my coverage ends. As a termination, I have an 18 month coverage period. This is known as my primary event.. 36 month periods are usually extensions when a second event eligible for COBRA occurs during the initial COBRA period. A good example would be if I were to have a divorce during this coverage. My ex would be eligible for an additional 18 months.

A 29-month period occurs when a qualifying disability occurs during the COBRA period.

As a system analyst, while knowing the basics of COBRA is a concept one can use on any client I was working on, it never hurt me to review the business rules of my client to make sure my testing was correct. The client might have special coverage rules for certain kinds of events and populations.

In addition, COBRA coverage will end automatically if any of the following situations occur:

- stops providing group health benefits
- Premiums are not paid within 30 days of the due date (with the exception of the initial premium, which is due within 45 days of your election date)
- A person eligible for continued benefits becomes covered under any other group health plan (unless the health plan has an enforceable preexisting condition clause) or becomes entitled to Medicare

If you or a qualified beneficiary subsequently becomes covered under another group health plan or entitled to Medicare, immediately call the

If you fail to submit monthly payments within 30 days of the due date, your coverage will end retroactive to the last day of the last month for which a payment was received. Any payments deposited after coverage was dropped will be refunded and won't extend your coverage.

Convenient Payment Options

Consider having your payment automatically deducted from your checking or savings account with direct debit - it's fast and easy.

All future payments will be taken from your account on the first of the month. If the first of the month falls on a weekend or bank holiday, the payment occurs the next business day. You'll no longer receive paper bills. Your bank statement serves as your confirmation of payment. If your payment amount changes, you'll receive a notice at least 10 days before the next scheduled payment. You may stop using direct debit at any time.

This section of my form is where a spouse and children would appear with their data for their COBRA rights as well.

The Person Information table is where the relationships of the dependents are noted, their disable status and if they are a qualified beneficiary. It also mentions their Medicare status as Medicare can impact eligibility.

The Coverage Information (CI) table is where coverage for COBRA eligible plans is denoted for the whole family. This table came be used to verify if the qualified beneficiary is correct. As long as a person is covered in at least 1 COBRA eligible plan, then qualified beneficiary (QB) should by "YES." Only if CI has all no answers for a person, then QB should be "NO."

IMPORTANT: EVERYONE FAMILY MEMBER IS ENTITLED TO THEIR OWN COPY OF AN COBRA NOTICE! Anyone impacted by termination gets their own termination and notice of COBRA Rights.
